

BUSINESS MEN LEARN OF TRUE COMMUNITY ASSETS

Cities Grow as Their Citizens Are Willing to Help Them Grow Is Substance of Addresses of Roland B. Woodward and Lucius E. Wilson at Chamber of Commerce Dinner -- The New Spirit of Co-operation.

One of the most remarkable departures in the way of a business men's dinner that Kingston has ever known was the affair Friday night at the Hotel Stuyvesant where more than 200 business and professional men listened to two speeches on Chamber of Commerce work and community service which were epoch-making in their breadth of view and in the accuracy of their local application. Lucius E. Wilson, campaign director of the American City Bureau, which is in charge of the expansion work for the Kingston Chamber of Commerce, and Secretary Roland B. Woodward of the Rochester Chamber, were the two principal speakers and their offerings, presented with an emphasis that was earnest and witty by turns, stirred the gray matter of their hearers in manner that has not been equalled at any occasion of this kind since the local chamber was founded.

Mayor Thompson, of Middletown, seconded the efforts of the American City Bureau and Mayor Palmer Canfield also spoke, briefly and to the point. The Rotary Club scored a big success by its singing during the dinner and President R. E. Leighton, who presided, was the recipient of much applause from this quarter as were the other speakers.

The dining room was prettily decorated with only a single omission, to which Secretary Woodward called attention with most dramatic effect in the course of his speech when he spoke of the absence of the flag and Old Glory was brought in to the accompaniment of the Star Spangled Banner. It was one of the most successful occasions of its kind the city has ever known and it is a safe prophecy that its effects will be epoch-making.

The Very Rev. Father John J. Hickey invoked the divine blessing upon the gathering and upon its work to be done in this community. The Rotary Club then started things going with a zest that has seldom, if ever been equalled at any similar affair in Kingston. Under the leadership of Harry P. Dodge and with Malsenholder's orchestra playing the accompaniment, Rotary fairly tilted the ceiling of the dining room and the attraction of their music penetrated to every corner of the room and to the corridors beyond. Even Chris Winne lost his habitual blasé expression and he joined in several choruses with fine enthusiasm.

President Leighton presented the guests when the delicious menu had reached a place where it could do the greatest good to the greatest number. Passing up the two principal speakers, Messrs. Woodward and Wilson, he called upon Mayor A. C. Thompson of Middletown, E. B. Gildersleeve of Poughkeepsie, President George B. Austin and Vice-President Howard C. Smith of Catskill Chamber; Col. C. Alonso Simmons, secretary of Poughkeepsie Chamber; President A. R. Beal and Secretary C. W. Haensel of the Newburgh Chamber, and W. Scott Raderburg, plain director from the Middletown Chamber.

Letters of regret were read from President Frank of the Poughkeepsie Chamber and from Albany, Troy and Catskill. Secretary Hochman sending his best wishes from this latter city. Turning, as he said, from the gastronomic to the economic and sociologic, President Leighton expressed pleasure at the amount of smoke in the room saying that there must be some fire behind it and he hoped the fire would be sufficient of a conflagration to consume all jealousy, antipathy and spats existing in Kingston.

Mayor Thompson, introduced as the first speaker, referred facetiously to the state hospital culture in his city and said that its best known industry was largely peopled with outside talent—from Newburgh and elsewhere along the valley. Adding ants to the dessert is a manner that made a hit. Mayor Thompson referred to conditions in his town previous to the Chamber of Commerce expansion work, every one plugging along, each in his own selfish way, property values not increasing and the town standing still without any esprit de corps whatever. Nobody was for the city and each was for himself and the chamber jogging along with about 100 members at $5 a year each.

Speaking of the lack of opportunity for young men under such conditions, he asked his hearers if they realized the number of young men leaving Kingston each year for New York and elsewhere, a pretty strong indictment of the city they were leaving. Today, he said, an entirely different spirit pervades Middletown as a result of the campaign waged in which 350 memberships of $25 each for three years were secured, a number now swelled to more than 400. No one believed it possible but today the men in different lines are all pulling together for the common good. It is not material advancement so much as a new spirit, one of brotherhood, and the speaker said the same condition could be brought about right here in Kingston. So great was the enthusiasm that memberships were secured from two Chinamen.

"And when you can get Chinamen you can get anybody," said the mayor amid laughter. In conclusion he recited the benefit that had been realized to the city and to the community generally through the creation or awakening of this new spirit and his speech made a distinct impression upon the audience so true to life were the pictures he painted of conditions in his city before the effort to capitalize co-operative effort and community enterprise.

Secretary Woodward's Modesty. Rochester, the Flower City of which you never hear anything but what is good, has long been the example in Chamber of Commerce organization from which other cities have sought to pattern and Secretary Woodward, the next speaker, proved himself as a worthy while representative of the socially progressive town on the banks of the Genesee. He referred in easy fashion to the well known modesty of Chamber of Commerce secretaries, a quality developed by the fact that they have so many bosses.

Americans, he declared, are as a rule too impatient. We hang the motto "Do it Now" on the wall and apply it to everybody but ourselves. Many problems are faced by public servants, he held, and the great cause contributing to failures of Chamber of Commerce is the fact that men become impatient. It is no easy matter to change the life-time habits and aspirations of a community, and in the process one must not be too impatient.

As to a Chamber's reason for being, he said that upon the success of such bodies had been built the success of numerous others active and valuable to the community life and he traced the development of Chambers of Commerce through three successive stages, Boasting, Boosting and Building.

The first of these was the era when Smithville was the center of the world and the Chamber of Commerce the official liar of the community. The dangers of this boasting he illustrated with stories of actual experience and likewise derided the boasting stage, saying that the brass band and gladhand were not now so popular. Boasting had proved a boomerang in its reaction on the community and boosting, in the long run had proved a futile piece of business.

The building stage which had since developed, he declared to be a condition where education is first needed in the Chamber of Commerce to build up the community. The dangers of this boasting he illustrated with stories of actual experience and likewise derided the boasting stage, saying that the brass band and gladhand were not now so popular. Boasting had proved a boomerang in its reaction on the community and boosting, in the long run had proved a futile piece of business.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN THE NEW TABERNACLE

Arrangements for the big evangelistic services to be held in this city are rapidly being completed, and it is expected that next week a series of cottage prayer meetings will be inaugurated. The city below the West Shore Railroad has been divided into twelve sections for the purpose of holding these prayer services which will be held Tuesday and Friday evenings until the opening of the campaign.

THE REV. L. K. PEACOCK.

The services will be in charge of the Peacock Evangelistic Party headed by the Rev. L. K. Peacock, a famous evangelist who at the present time is holding a series of evangelistic services at Fairfield, Iowa, and is meeting with great success. He also some time ago held a series of services at Delhi in Delaware county.

H. C. Warth, who is a member of the evangelistic party is the chorister and Bible teacher. He is a resident of Oberlin, Ohio, and has had considerable experience in evangelistic work. Mr. Warth will have charge of the large chorus choir which will be organized for the services.

and the business is not going to grow. It costs the average manufacturer about $70 for every hire and fire, Mr. Woodward said, and went on to describe the direct benefits to manufacturers from satisfactory housing conditions, clean streets, parks and playgrounds and schools.

In not taking a part in this the manufacturer was losing a great opportunity in reality was not a manufacturer he held.

Of professional men, he declared that they could serve, clergy, lawyers and physicians. His idea of the Chamber of Commerce was where the brewer is sitting beside the Methodist minister, "and neither will be any worse off when the session is over," he said, "than each other."

"In your organization you should have working men. We are all working men but I am referring particularly to the men who work with their hands who if they are not in your organization they should be. They should be members because they live here and it is here they should live the fullness of life for themselves and for their wives and their children. I wonder at the men who take no interest in them or their problems. What is it to live in Kingston? What you have is most precious in Kingston and if it is to be kept clean and precious and right depends upon your organization."

The speaker compared the relations of the retailer and the public to that of the man who is a retailer and a little dealer. In so far as community life is concerned lots of retailers are dead from the waist up. There is only one answer to the mercantile question, he must be a true servant of the community. Is the Retailer's who serves best profits?

Where Services Are Held.

For the purpose of accommodating the thousands who will attend the services a large tabernacle seating over 2,000 people is being erected on Delaware avenue, near the head of Broadway. This building, will be heated with ten large stoves. It is modeled after plans of other tabernacles which have been erected all over the country where evangelistic services are and have been held. It will be taken down at the close of the campaign.

Churches Assisting.

The campaign is to be held under the auspices of the Rondout Presbyterian Church, the Trinity M. E. Church and the Wurts Street Baptist Church. It is expected that every church in the city will also render as much assistance to make the campaign a success as possible.

Services Start Dec. 31.

It is planned to open the campaign on Sunday, December 31, with three services one at 10:30 in the morning, one at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and the third at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. The campaign will run for six weeks.

pressed thanks to the preceding speakers for showing Kingston how she can go beyond these boundaries and for seconding local efforts by their presence.

"What is a city but the people?" was the remark the mayor attributed to the Bard of Avon and which he said held sound today. The city successful is the city whose people are co-operators, energizers and lookers ahead. He dwelt upon the human power of vision to see the sun some 93,000,000 miles away and said that the Chamber of Commerce asked citizens to look ahead 30,000 seconds, or three years, a comparatively short time for so important a subject as the one in hand.

There are mighty forces in Kingston that are latent," said the mayor, "if we have any civic pride in Kingston, any civic energy, let us exercise it; if we have any civic indignation let us exercise it."

He closed with an appeal for the co-operation of all present in the expansion movement to realize for Kingston the new and fresh growth of business and betterment every year in the future.

Mr. Wilson's Speech.

Introduced by Mr. Leighton as an M.D., "municipal developer," Director Wilson made a speech that will long remain in the memory of every man present. A man posted upon the experiences of scores of municipalities and their accomplishments along Chamber of Commerce development lines, he proved to be a speaker of infinite capacity of illustration and position of unquestioned evidence as to the soundness of views plainly novel.

In opening he promised not to tell any Ford stories which he said were more useful to dinner speakers than the same machines were to Chambers of Commerce secretaries. As to the question as to what constituted a Chamber of Commerce, he said no two men looked at it alike. As for a belief that his were the conclusions of an impractical man, he volunteered the information that he had traded horses only last week on his farm in Vermont and had since been offered $50 for his trade. He referred to his conception of the business of a Chamber of Commerce, to make people think, and further stated that through the generosity of some of our business men the new organization was going to be able to have some workingmen in its membership.

WAIST CO. BUYS KNITTING MILL

The Bostonian Waist Company have purchased the three-story building at 50 Hasbrouck avenue known as the old knitting mill from Henry W. Otis, together with the adjoining lot, bought from the Newark Lime and Cement Company, on which the waist company plans to build in the future. The deeds were filed with the county clerk Friday.

The managers of the factory, Mr. Morgan and M. Elzefon brought their equipment and about twenty of their employees from New York city in February of this year, through the efforts of the M. A. Reis real estate agency. They immediately rented the knitting mill property, which had previously been occupied by the Derrenbacher Candy Company. Now more than ninety machines are running and 120 workers are employed. Between thirty and forty more workers are needed. A successful season is expected, although at present there is a temporary delay in the production because of lack of materials. The company specializes in women's shirt waists which retail at 98 cents and $1.25.

SANITARIUM FUND NEARLY $13,000

Team reports for the Beneficence Campaign again shows good results, nearly $1,000 again reached with only part of the teams reporting Friday evening.

Last evening at the Campaign Headquarters finished the free supper to the workers. The attendance was large and at the close of the supper Manager Converse called on the following captains present for a toast: Dr. Levitas, Mr. Messenger, Dr. Day, and Miss Madden. Several of the workers in an impromptu way spoke of their experience during the campaign and it was one of the most enjoyable evening so far held by the workers.

Mr. Converse commented on the good work of the few workers who were diligent and conscientious in their work, stating that at no time had the reports of those people interested in the campaign and who were soliciting, been below the average day's work which would have made up the $35,000 which was a sufficient number of workers been canvassing.

The returns for the evening were as follows:

Capt. O'Meara, No. 1	$125.00
Capt. Levitas, No. 2	166.00

WHY SOME BOYS GET IN TROUBLE

Half a Dozen Boys Who Had Been Summoned Before Recorder Lang Today Were Cigarette Smokers and Behind in School Work.

For some time past a gang of young boys ranging in age from 11 to 11 years, have been making a nuisance of themselves around the central section of the city, and this morning a half a dozen of the boys were notified to appear before Recorder Lang and explain.

From questioning of the boys by Recorder Lang it developed that all of them were from one to three years behind in their school work and that only one of the number studied home, and that was his confession that they smoked cigarettes, and all of them were allowed to run the streets nights until 9 o'clock and later. This accounted for the fact that they were so far back in their school work.

"When do you expect to finish school?" asked Recorder Lang of one boy, who stated he was 11 years old and in the fourth grade at school, but the boy was unable to answer.

All of the boys were warned that if they did not behave themselves in the future they need not expect any leniency from the court.

The fact that boys under 14 years of age are allowed by their parents to run the streets late at night accounts in a great measure for the many boys who are placed on probation in recorder's court every year, and in some cases the boys who become hardened are sent away to institutions. While it is against the law to sell young boys cigarettes it would seem that the law was being violated from the fact that the great majority of the boys placed on probation are cigarette smokers.

The boy question, judging from the large number of complaints lodged with the police weekly, is growing to be a serious problem in Kingston.

K. H. S. GIRLS WIN FAST GAME

Friday afternoon, the Girls' Varsity Basketball Team of K. H. S. met the best opposition any team has faced this school year. The Rhinebeck lasses came over the river decked out to win, and well they might hope to do so, as they have long held the distinction of being good fighters on a basketball court and usually present the biggest obstacle in the way of the Kingston team. Still their hopes of a victory were shattered in the end, thanks to the grit and endurance that seems to be inherent in feminine defenders of the maroon and white.

The visiting girls became acquainted with the strange court quickly and kept the score very low and in their favor until after the second half at which time the girls from the hillside village were in the lead by five to three. But after the short rest the local team went at it again as though they had not been exerting themselves in the least before and soon changed the lead of things.

The home team was at some disadvantage because two of their players could not play on account of being down in their studies. But the subs filled in the breach splendidly and gave evidence of fine prospects for a team again next year.

The girls will, of course, only measure such success by its relation to the championship. They have reached the point where the mere winning of a game does not enthrall them and one defeat would make them dissatisfied for the rest of the year. From this standpoint then it can be said that Kingston begins to have the grounds for boasting of the laurels she will win. The girls evidently believe in picking out the hardest work first. Therefore they dealt with Monticello last week and Rhinebeck yesterday afternoon. Next Saturday they may go out of town to play in Newburgh and at a later date they will journey down to Middletown to beat whatever they may find awaiting them.

The score of yesterday's games is as follows:

THE KITCHEN CABINET

When taste change is slow and the supply of energy equals the demand, as in well-nourished persons in middle life and old age, the quantity of nitrogenous food should be diminished.

APPLE DAINTIES.

There are many delicious dishes that may be made from the common everyday apple. When apples lack flavor various fruits may be added to help the deficiency.

Grated pineapple, guavas, dates, raisins and figs as well as various fruit juices may be used with excellent results.

Apples baked with nuts make a most delicious breakfast dish. Core and peel them and fill with chopped nuts, sugar and bit of orange or candied lemon peel, bake until tender.

Jelly may be used for filling, orange marmalade, raisins and nuts, dates and figs, or marshmallows with jelly. So many combinations will occur to one that there may be a constant variety. Serve them cold with whipped cream.

Apple betty is never out of style. Chop a pint of apples, add buttered crumbs, brown sugar, a little spice, either cinnamon or nutmeg, put the ingredients into a buttered baking dish in layers and bake without any water if the apples are juicy.

Apples and Almonds.—Core and pare a half dozen even-sized apples, wash carefully in a strainer or sugar and water, remove carefully to a deep dish and decorate with blanched almonds, cut in eighths, lengthwise, and thrust point down into the apples. Sprinkle with powdered sugar, pour the sirup in which they were cooked around them and brown in the oven. Serve either hot or cold with whipped cream and sugar.

Apples in Sirup.—Cook perfect apples unpeeled, red ones are prettier, in a heavy sirup until tender, then place in the dish in which they are to be served. Add to the juice a slice or two of lemon and cook briskly for a few minutes, then pour over the apples. Chill and serve with cream.

For a dainty dish for an invalid, a red apple cooked in water until tender, then carefully peeled, leaving the pink tint on the apple, or scraping the inside of the peeling and putting the tint on the cheek, is a dish most attractive. Serve with cream and sugar. This is called "apple in bloom."

KINGSTON, N. Y., DEC. 9, 1916.

It is a perfectly safe assertion that the definitions given of the objects and opportunities of a Chamber of Commerce at the Dollar Dinner on Friday night were a revelation to most of the two hundred business and professional men who heard them presented with all the force that goes with expert testimony given in simple language and with homely illustrations. The world moves and it has never moved more rapidly and with such a complete swing away from once cherished objectives than has been manifested in the fields of endeavor where these commercial bodies labor and do all their work. It is a time of the new talk, the new thought and higher standards of ideals in community life. This modern dispensation has its own creed of service to the community which is a marked departure from the hitherto accepted gospel of immediate and restricted material rewards for concentrated effort. The atmosphere of enterprise, the habit of giving and the custom of appreciation are offered as the basic essentials of the new doctrine. While at first thought these may seem too intangible for practical consideration, the creation of a community state of mind embodying the three conditions named brings in its wake a host of benefits making for a busier, brighter and better city as the experience of scores of wide-awake municipalities has proved beyond peradventure of doubt. Under former lines the work of the Chamber of Commerce has not been a failure in any sense but in the expanding and re-direction of its activities with an increased membership, the possibilities presented in Kingston are just as potential as those existing anywhere else in this land. To realize these possibilities to the very best advantage is a goal in whose attainment the hearty cooperation of every business man and citizen should be cheerfully given. Every man owes it to himself and to his city to put forth the best that is in him to make that city a better place in which to live and do business.

With the bluntness of a soldier, Major General Hugh L. Scott pronounces the militia system a failure, the Hay act federalizing the National Guard ineffective and expensive and asserts that the volunteer spirit, upon which the country has never relied in vain, is moribund. This vigorous pronouncement is in decided contrast to the sidestepping in Secretary of War Baker's report which preceded that of the Chief of Staff of the regular army but a few days. Universal military training is the remedy proposed by Major General Scott for the ills of the present recruiting system and, while it is doubtful that all of his fellow countrymen will agree with his prescription, the diagnosis of the trouble so frankly presented by this soldier cannot but meet general acquiescence. The breakdown of the Hay federalization act which was heralded by the administration heads, with the exception of Secretary Garrison, as the last word in the program for efficient national defense, is conceded by militia officers as well. At the same time the part that the Federal authorities played in the mobilization of the militia on the border cannot be recalled with any feeling of satisfaction, the admitted unpreparedness of the War Department in rising to its responsibilities, the last June being the chief contributing factor in the failure to which Major General Scott points. As for the scarcity of recruits, economic reasons and the peculiar phases of the "emergency" as created by the administration account for the unwillingness of young men to respond to the call, an unwillingness since strengthened by the treatment accorded the State troops in the border camps. Army reform is a big subject to be handled in any one report and the confusion of the popular mind over this problem is reflected in the widely divergent conclusions and recommendations of the Chief of Staff and the Secretary of War.

The humiliating failure of the Democratic program of preparedness in so far as the army is concerned is brought out with painful emphasis in Major General Scott's findings yet the country is being called upon to foot some mighty big bills for the carrying out of this same program. According to Treasury Department estimates now before Congress, the expenses for all branches of the government for 1917 will aggregate the no insignificant sum of $1,268,715,834. Of the items going to make up this total, the increase in that of the Navy Department from $141,835,654 in 1915 to $282,000,000 for next year will not be begrudged if the building of new naval armament is carried out on proper lines and on the scale projected. The army, however, has had its estimate jumped from $172,973,092 in 1915 to $421,352,447 for the coming year, yet actually the regular army is smaller at the present time than it was a year ago. Recruiting here has fallen behind but there has been a tremendous jump in the expenditures planned and the Hay reorganization scheme has proved itself but a waste of money and of time more valuable than the cash outlay. It is to be hoped that the Republican minority in Congress will point out such shortcomings at this session and, even though it should fall in remedying things, responsibility for these monumental errors should be placed squarely where they belong, at the door of the Wilson administration.

William Jennings Bryan changes his mind so often that it is hard even for the alert newspaper correspondents at Washington to keep pace with him. He has recanted his belief of a decade ago that the government should own the railroads and, he told the Newlands Committee, now favors regulation limiting the earnings to a sum sufficient to keep the stock at par and at the same time apply a percentage of profits toward the reduction of their capitalization. He would reduce this capitalization to a point equal to the cost of reproduction of their property. He further expressed his opinion that all railroad legislation should be exercised contemporaneously by the Federal government and the States. An illuminating sidelight on the value of Bryan's testimony was given when in reply to a question of the chairman, he said that he knew nothing of the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission has done more to properly regulate the railroads than have the States. He was also off about 100,000 miles in the total mileage of the railroads in the United States. Outside of these two points, Bryan qualified as an expert and will at once proceed to jam his newest discoveries on the railroad problem down the public throat in the hope of finding an easier path to his one great objective in 1920.

Two girls friends met in the street and stopped to shake hands. "So glad to see you, Grace," said the taller-made Alice. "Was just on my way to ask you, as my oldest friends, to be one of my bridesmaids." "Bridesmaids! How lovely! I did not know you were engaged," replied Grace. "It's sudden, very sudden; but he's awfully in love and is just too lovely to live. Will you act?" "Act! Of course. 'I'll be charming. But, moving forward and speaking in an undertone, 'do come around the corner and tell me all about it. Here comes that idiotic, irrepressible donkey, Jim Berton. He's prying as though he meant to stop, and I don't care to be seen talking to him.'"

Terrible Mistake.

"Halloo, Brown," said Jones. "I saw your wife this morning. By Jove, that new coat of hers must have cost a pot of money. You're doing specially well at present?" "No, not exactly," replied Brown, moodily. "Fact is, she got it by accident."

"By accident!" exclaimed Jones. "How was that?" "Well, old fellow, it was this way. I got home rather late the other night. The hall was very dark, but I could just distinguish a figure standing by the chair. I slipped up to her, put my arm around her waist and whispered, 'Mary, give your little boy a kiss.'"

"But—but," stammered Jones. "I thought your wife's name was Kate?" "It is," murmured Brown. "That's how she got the coat."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

An Early Advertiser.

One of the earliest advertisers on record was Noah. Day after day he announced the fact that there was going to be a great flood, and that in preparation for the same he was constructing an ark, on which a few people with good characters might engage passage. He got the merry ha ha and even when it did begin to rain, his fellow townsmen said they guessed that it wasn't going to be much of a shower, anyway. Again Noah advertised the fact that state rooms could be engaged on the ark, but as no one applied for them, he filled them up with elephants, heifers, camels and such like creatures.

It was not until Shem and Ham pulled in the gang plank that the people there with his announcements. Then there was a rush for the box office but it was closed, and the ark was beyond the three-mile limit. There was terrible excitement in town that night, but next morning all was quiet under six fathoms of water. There isn't much of a moral to this except it be that when a good, honest, reliable man advertises people should believe him.—Exchange.

Leaving home for his place of business, a man of calculating mind will discover that valuable time is lost in want of consideration by others for the commonest rights of thoroughfare. A friend of mathematical bent has calculated that a hundred years of actual working time are lost every day on the streets of New York by thoughtless people who take the left of the sidewalk instead of the right, who are negligent in crossing the streets and hold up traffic or become inmates of hospitals by inviting accidents.

Death Rate Among Poets. Poets that can be killed by the ridicule of those who do not understand them are better dead, and they have never succeeded in saving their lives by their explanations. The world will never kill a poet because he is an imagist or a vers libriste, but there is one thing that it surely will do; it will kill an imagist or a vers libriste because he is not a poet, and that side of the matter seems to be strangely overlooked by those who speak of the New Movement.—The New Republic.

Has Any One Explained This Coal-Saving Point to You?

When you want to boil water quickly to poach an egg, you don't put the water in a deep, narrow-bottomed kettle. You get a big, broad-bottomed pan and put a little water in it and it boils almost while you are cracking the egg.

The Kingstonian Boiler acts just like that broad-bottomed pan does.

That's one reason why it heats quickly and with less coal than other boilers.

PANTS FACTORY TO RESUME WORK

The Lyons-Koffler-Liberman Company, pants manufacturers, whose factory in the loft above the Kingston Foundry on Prince street was completely destroyed by fire in September, will again occupy their old quarters early in January. The company was idle from the time of the fire until three weeks ago when they took over the plant of the Beacon Light Shirt Company in the Kennedy building on lower Broadway. Twenty-five workers are now employed but upon the transfer to the Prince street factory sixty more will be needed to operate the eighty machines to be installed. The company has fifty men employed in New York City factory and have no trouble in getting help but labor is so scarce in Kingston because of the many factories that the local manager anticipates difficulty in securing help when the removal is made.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR NEXT WEEK

By Telegram to The Freeman.

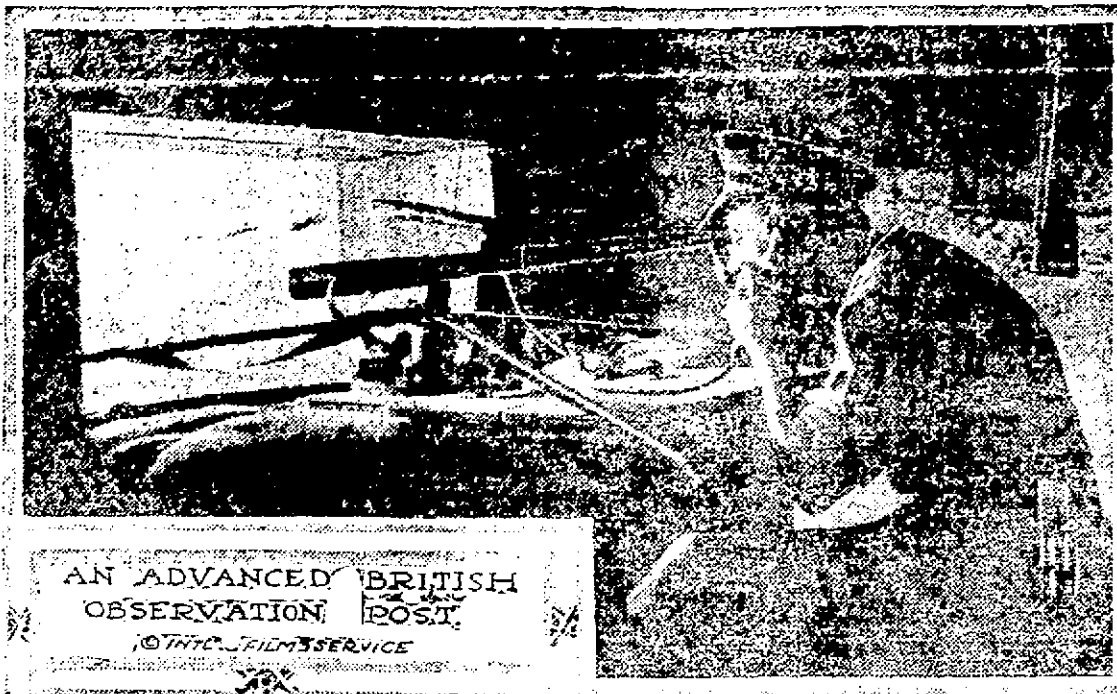

Washington, Dec. 9.—The weather bureau today issued the following forecast for next week:

North Atlantic States—Cold weather will prevail the first half of the week, probably continuing until Thursday when there will be a change to warmer weather. Fair weather is indicated for the next several days, probably followed by rains and snows after Thursday.

Region of Great Lakes—Cold weather will prevail during the first half of the week, followed by a reaction to normal temperature after Wednesday. Overcast weather will prevail the greater part of the week, and there is a probability of snows Wednesday and Thursday attending the eastward movement of a disturbance across the Great Lakes on these days.

Optimistic Thought.

A promise against law or duty is void of its own nature.

OBSERVING ENEMY POSITIONS.

This is a decidedly dangerous occupation. The British soldier shown is occupying an advanced observation trench. These trenches are little runways leading directly from the fighting trench toward the enemy trenches. They are dug by sappers at the greatest risk and sometimes run into the very center of the man's land. The soldier shown is far in advance of his own lines, with which he is in communication by telephone.

The "Pullman" negligee is the happy invention of some clever designer. It is shown here in pale blue, trimmed with hemstitching in matching tone. The secret of its usefulness is mainly in the cut, which includes long, raglan sleeves and full skirt. The beauty of this garment is that it will not "chafe" in the manner usual in dressing gowns. One is attractively and comfortably covered when wearing one of them.

MRS. GRACE LESTER & CHILDREN.

ASKS COURT FOR ALLOWANCE TO BUY COAL.

(Mrs. Grace Lester and Children.)

New York, Dec. 9.—Although mistress of the $200,000 estate of her deceased husband, William C. Lester, up to a few months ago, Mrs. Grace Lester, a beautiful young widow, has appeared to the Surrogate's court for an allowance of $25 a month to enable her to heat the home of herself and her two children, William and Grace. Mrs. Lester told the court that her reduced circumstances followed the breaking of her husband's will by his grandson, William C. Lester, 24, compelling her to move to her home at Grand Central, L. I., which was built for summer use. She said that she fears for her children's health, and that she is unable to work unless the court adds to her allowance to permit her to buy coal. She asserts she already owes her coal merchant $250 and cannot buy more fuel on credit.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Dec. 9.—While the tone was generally steady all through the early trading on the stock exchange today, price changes were irregular, with some stocks making substantial gains, while others sustained moderate losses. A good deal of interest was attached to the trading in the Marine issues, because of the initial trading in the actual stock for the first time. This morning the trust companies certificates for the preferred stock opened at 118, against 117 1/2 at the close yesterday, while the actual preferred stock sold at 119 1/2. Later the certificate for the preferred dropped to 116 1/2, and then rallied to 118 1/2. The common certificates ranged from 46 1/2 to 47 1/2. A Rubber rose 5 1/2 points to a new high record of 84, with the buying accompanied by the report of a coming consolidation. U. S. Steel Common dropped 3 to 125 1/2, and then rose to 125 3/4. Central Leather advanced 1 1/2 points to 110 1/2. The copper shares generally showed fractional losses. Chile Copper continued in supply and fell a point to 23.

The tone at the close was irregular. A stronger tone was shown in the general list in the last hour, when Steel Common advanced about a point from its low level, recovering about half of its early loss. The copper stocks were also in better demand and made moderate rallies. American Smelting, however, was weak, selling down to 113, a loss of 3 1/2 points, from which it rallied to around 114 toward the close. The Marine issues were heavy. Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

2. To form the habit of giving.
3. To establish the custom of appreciation, or a reasonable acknowledgment of public services of men.
The first of these, the speaker pointed out, is an intangible thing but nevertheless it lies at the bottom of all the values in which the business men deal. He cited Dallas, Texas, and its 18 story hotel, built because a man believed in his town and its future and worked for them. The same spirit exhibited in Detroit, Oklahoma City and other places, the spirit that builds out of nothing, has done the most for these communities. Land in Oklahoma City at $1.20 an acre 25 years ago has been increased through the enterprise of men to more than 100 millions of dollars.

"Where did that enhancement of value come if not from the spirit of enterprise?" he asked. "Men went there because they wanted to participate in the unearned increment of a city determined to grow."

By way of contrast he cited the condition of a New England town. "Illustrating the spirit of the 'inhabitants,' not 'citizens,' with stories that caught and held his audience's attention to the utmost. There the prices of realty are less than they were ten years ago, such communities reflecting in their littleness the littleness of the men in control of their destinies. The cities making the greatest progress have proved are the cities where the largest number of men are doing the greatest things. Today are those men greatest who are being educated to do the greatest things."

The making of Detroit was not the automobile as it was made in Pittsburgh fully as early and in Cleveland, in Kokomo, Indiana, automobiles were made before they were in any of the cities named. Kokomo failed because she did not have the human material needed in this competition. Detroit, however, built the automobiles manufactured in this country and does it without a single natural advantage. It was the Board of Commerce and the business men working through it that made Detroit possible. Not only did Detroit pay its men well but she furnished the means of recreation for them and their families, a fact that has attracted industries such as the Furroughs adding machine company and which has made Detroit the greatest labor market of the country and one without a strike in 22 years. How Ford decreased the unit cost of production when he raised the minimum wage to $5 a day was cited.

Seventy-five per cent of the young men educated in our high schools leave Kingston at the end of their studies, a condition by which Kingston is contributing 75 cents out of every dollar spent for education to build up some other community. A good slave in the market before the war was valued at $1,000 and every time this community loses one of its young men it loses at least that sum. The live town he defined as one that regards tomorrow as the best day in the calendar while the dead town has its eye constantly fixed upon yesterday. The atmosphere of enterprise created in the former is the force that says to the young man here is the place for you, the place where you are known and the place you know best. It is the spirit that changes a town from the control of carpers to place it in the hands of true optimists. When a young man leaves he takes with him the wonderful asset of his youth and the hope of inheritance as well. The speaker said he looked forward to the time when the community would be so fortunate as to lead the young man to invest his youth and his savings at home.

The habit of giving was the second proposition which, he said, can only be learned by giving. You cannot give money away if it goes to a legitimate purpose. It is a habit acquired something like the habit of smoking and with about the same effort at the initial attempt. It isn't the rich city that gives but the willing city and the profit in the giving is reflected on all sides, the town that makes the most money being the town that gives the most money. To build up a community on former lines of Chamber of Commerce effort would be to build up a community of bickering trained wolves, he declared, and drove home this point with a number of apt examples.

VELOCK'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER
COST OF LIVING TAKES A TUMBLE

(By Jack Velock.)
International News Sports Editor.
Washington, Dec. 9.—The "cost of living" has taken a drop. Advice from all sections of the country to the department of agriculture and of justice indicate this fact. The reduction in prices, while small, is general. Officials believe it will be continued. They place the responsibility on the announcement of the government that criminal prosecutions of food price manipulators are certain. Officials of the department of justice claim they already have concrete evidence of conspiracy against the Board of Trade dealers, middlemen in almost every line of food supplies, and others. Coordinated action is planned against these persons. The agents of the department of justice, operating under the orders of United States Attorney Anderson of Boston, already have turned in reports which, it is stated, show general conspiracy to manipulate prices.

Huston and Ruppert, you see, are looking forward to an American League pennant, and when they succeed in winning one they do not want to go into a world series using someone else's property. Last fall when the Red Sox transferred their games, with the Dodgers to Braves Field in Boston there was much unfavorable comment made by the baseball public, for it appeared that there was too much co-operation between the National and American leagues and the thought of it robbed the big series of some of its attractiveness.

So the Yankee owners have taken their cue from the Boston situation and they mean to be prepared. It is known that the owners of the Giants would rather keep the Polo Grounds sacred to National League ball. They want the historic old grounds all to themselves.

The question of a location for the proposed Yankee plant is all that has been holding up the progress of plans for its building. Whether to build the new park in Manhattan or the Borough of Queens is the point the Colonel and the Captain have to decide.

It is the belief among a majority of sports writers that as soon as the Yankees get a park of their own no American and National league clubs will trade each other's grounds except for the world's series, and it is believed this will add stimulus to the game.

Steamboats to be Repaired.
The Central Hudson Steamboat Company will make repairs to its large fleet of vessels this winter. There is to be a change of boilers on the steamer M. Martin. The James T. Brett will probably be broken up. A large part of the copper has already been removed from the hull and sold. The Homer Ramsdell is having a new freight deck put in. The work is being done in sections while the vessel is on her run. The steamer Jacob H. Tremper will have a few minor repairs made. It has not been decided what would be done on the William F. Rorer. The steamers Odell and Newburgh will be hauled out and their hulls repainted and some minor repairs made. The old Marlborough is "wintering" at the Franklin street pier in New York city and is being used as a freight storehouse. The fire in the works of the Tampa Shipbuilding Company destroyed the findings of the new steamer Ponchartraine and it will be the early part of next summer before the steamer can be added to the fleet.

Forestry in Germany.
Forestry is one of the chief sources of revenue for the numerous small towns like Oberdorf, Germany, and the conservation of tree wealth has been developed to an almost exact science. Both on the royal land and in the community forests the amount of timber cut annually is not allowed to exceed the annual growth. Numerous fir tree nurseries are scattered throughout the region.

Of the things which man can do to make here below, by far the most momentous, wonderful, and worthy are the things we call books.—Carlyle.
